1	Καβαλίς	Καβαλίς, πόλις πλησίον Κιβύρας πρὸς νότον Μαιάνδρου. [Στράβων τρισκαιδεκάτῃ.] ἡ γενικὴ Καβαλίδος. ὁ πολίτης Καβαλεὺς. Ἐκαταίος Ἀσία. καὶ θηλυκῶς, ὡς Στράβων ἐν τῇ εἰρημένῃ ᾠτόγονοι δὲ Λυδῶν οἱ Κιβυράται τῶν κατασχόντων τὴν Καβαλίδαν". ὁ δὲ πολυίστωρ Ἀλέξανδρος Καβάλισσαν φησὶ τὸ θηλυκόν. εἶναι δὲ τὸ γένος αὐτῇν Ὀλβίαν.	Kabalis: a city near Kibyra, to the south of the Maiandros. [Strabo, book 13.] The genitive is 'Kabalidos'. A citizen is a 'Kabaleus'. Hekataios in his Asia. Also in the feminine, as per Strabo in the aforementioned passage: 'The Kibyratani are descendants of the Lydians who gained possession of Kabalis.' However, Alexander Polyhistor says that the feminine is 'Kabalissa', and that they are Olbian by descent.	* [Στράβων τρισκαιδεκάτῃ.] The AI has not translated this (as it is in Meineke but not Billerbeck?). This is the citation referred to by ἐν τῇ εἰρημένῃ later: 'in the aforementioned text'. * εἶναι δὲ τὸ γένος αὐτῇν Ὀλβίαν. The machine has missed that this is still an indirect statement (accusativus cum infinitivus) relaying more information about Kabalis that Alexander says.
2	Καβασσίς	Καβασσός, πόλις ἐν Καππαδοκίᾳ, πατρίς Ὀθρυονέως. Ὅμηρος "Καβησσόθεν ἔνδον ἔοντα". Ἐκαταίος δ' ὁ Μιλήσιος Καβησσὸν πόλιν εἶναι φησιν ὑπερβάντι τὸν Θράκιον Αἶμον. καὶ συμφωνεῖ καὶ ἡ τοῦ γάμου ἐλπίς τῶν Θρακῶν ἀκολασίᾳ. Ἑλλάνικος δὲ τῆς Λυκίας πόλιν Καβησσόν. Ἀπίων δὲ ἀληθέστερόν φησι κώμην εἶναι Καππαδοκίας μεταξύ Ταρσοῦ καὶ Μαζάκων. Μάζακα δὲ ἡ Καππαδοκίας ἐκαλεῖτο Καισάρεια. ἐθνικὸς ἀρκεῖ τὸ Ὅμηρικόν Καβησσόθεν. πολλὰ γὰρ τοιαῦτα, ὡς τὸ Καμειρόθεν, τὰ τοπικὰ ἐθνικῶς. δύνатаι δὲ Καβήσσιος ἢ Καβηροσίτης.	Kabassos: a city in Kappadokia, homeland of Othryoneus. Homer: 'who was there from Kabessos'. Hekataios of Miletos says that Kabessos is a city after one has crossed Thracian Haimos. The expectation of marriage also accords with the shamelessness of the Thracians. Hellanikos, however, states that Kabessos is a city in Lykia, and Apion says more correctly that it is a village in Kappadokia between Tarsos and Mazaka. The Mazaka in Kappadokia used to be called 'Kaisareia'. The Homeric form 'Kabesothen' is sufficient as an ethnonym, for there are many of this type such as the form 'Kameirothen' (the locative terms functioning as ethnonyms). 'Kabesios' or 'Kabesites' is also possible.	* Ἀπίων δὲ etc... this is co-ordinating δέ (linking with the previous adversative δέ - 'But Hellanikos says that... and Apion says more truly that...'. The AI was very eager to use 'on the one hand' for δέ with this translation.	* Καβησσὸν πόλιν εἶναι φησιν ὑπερβάντι τὸν Θράκιον Αἶμον - the dative participle is awkward; could this be part of a direct quotation: '(Hekataios the Milesian) says that Kabessos is a city "after one scales Thracian Haimos"? * καὶ συμφωνεῖ καὶ ἡ τοῦ γάμου ἐλπίς τῶν Θρακῶν ἀκολασίᾳ: "...the expectation of marriage also accords with the shamelessness of the Thracians". This reads as a non sequitor, but is a reference to the minor hero Orthryoneus who was promised the hand of Cassandra in marriage if he fought at Troy. Stephanos assumes the reader is aware of the reference is using Orthryoneus' character as evidence that his hometown (Kabassos) is in Thrace.
3	Καβεiriα	Καβεiriα, πόλις τῆς κάτω Ἀσίας, ἥς τὴν γῆν Καβεiriοι ὥκου. εἰσὶ καὶ Καβεiriοι ἔθνος Βοιωτίας, ὡς Πausanias ἐνάτω. καὶ Καβεiros Καβεiriα, ἀφ' οὗ τὸ Καβεiraῖος καὶ Καβεiraia καὶ Καβεiriτής. καὶ Καβεiriον· τούτου τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καβεiriος, ὡς τὸ Βυζάντιον Βυζάντιος, καὶ Καβεiriα τὸ θηλυκόν. καὶ Καβεiriεύς. καὶ νύμφαι Καβεiriίδες, ἀπὸ Καβεiriούς τῆς Πρωτέως καὶ Ἀγχινόης, ἀφ' ἥς καὶ Ἡφαίστου Κάδμιλος. ἔστι δὲ ἡ μὲν Καβεiriς παρὰ τὸ Κάβειρος, ἡ δὲ Καβεiriάς παρὰ τὸ Καβεiriος. τὸ κτητικὸν Καβεiriικός καὶ Καβεiriκή, καὶ καβεiriάζεσθαι ῥῆμα.	Kabeiria: a city in western Asia, whose land the Kabeiroi used to inhabit. There are also Kabeiroi, a people in Boiotia, as per Pausanias, book 9. Kabeiria is also 'Kabeiros', from which comes the forms 'Kabeiraaios', 'Kabeiraia' and 'Kabeiritēs'. As for the Kabeirion, the ethnonym of this is 'Kabeirios' (as 'Byzantios' is from the form 'Byzantion'), and the feminine is 'Kabeiria'. Also 'Kabeirios'. As for the nymphs, 'Kabeirides' is from Kabeiro daughter of Proteus and Anchinoe, from whom also came Kadmilos son of Hephaistos. There are also both 'Kabeiris' derived from the form 'Kabeiros', and 'Kabeirias' derived from the form 'Kabeirios'. The possessives are 'Kabeirikos' and 'Kabeirike', and 'kabeiriazesthai' is a verb.	* The AI translated Καβεiriούς as a genitive of Καβεiriός despite the ensuing τῆς (It's actually Καβεiriώ).	* κατὰ literally means "lower", but in geographical terminology it commonly corresponds to "western", especially in the contrast between Κάτω and Ἀνω Ἀσία. In authors such as Stephanos, Κάτω Ἀσία normally refers to the western, Aegean-facing regions of Asia Minor rather than to a lower elevation. * "ἥς τὴν γῆν Καβεiriοι ὥκου". Stephanos is presumably referring to the Κάβειροι, the chthonic deities associated with Lemnos and Thebes and often linked with Asia Minor. This likely explains his subsequent clarification that there was also a people of Boeotia called Καβεiriοι. * Καβεiriοι: Steph. uses the masc. form with -ιοι, not the usual -οι (this masc. form in *-ιος has escaped the notice of all major lexica). * 'Βυζάντιος' is a quasi-pendent nominative, as an etymon of 'Βυζάντιον'.
4	Καβελλιῶν	Καβελλιῶν, πόλις Μασσαλίας. Ἀρτεμίδωρος ἐν πρώτῃ γεωγραφουμένων. τὸ ἐθνικὸν κατὰ τὸν ἐπιχώριον τύπον Καβελλιωνήσιος ὡς Ταρρακωνήσιος, κατὰ δὲ τὸν Ἑλληνικὸν Καβελλιωνίτης ὡς Ταρρακωνίτης.	Kabellion: a city of Massalia. Artemidoros in book 1 of his Geography. The ethnonym in the local form is 'Kabellionesios' (as in 'Tarrakonesios'), but in the Greek form it is 'Kabellionites' (as in 'Tarrakonites').	* The AI transliterated γεωγραφουμένων to 'Geographoumena'; 'Geography' is fine (Strabo's Geography is referred to as both the γεωγραφικά and the γεωγραφουμένων)	* πόλις Μασσαλίας - This is a reference to the fact that Kabellion was founded by Massalia as a colony.
5	Καβύλη	Καβύλη, πόλις Θράκης οὐ πόρρω τῆς τῶν Ἀστών χώρας. Πολύβιος τρισκαιδεκάτῃ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καβυληνός ὡς Ἀρτακηνός.	Kabyle: a city in Thrace, not far from the territory of the Astai. Polybios, book 13. The ethnonym is 'Kabylenos' (as in 'Artakenos').
6	Καδμεiα	Καδμεiα πόλις, Θηβῶν ἀκρόπολις, ἀφ' ἥς οἱ Θηβαῖοι Καδμεiοι καὶ Καδμεiωνες καὶ Καδμεiαι, καὶ τὸ τεῖχος Καδμεiα.	Kadmeia: a city, the acropolis of Thebes, after which Thebans are 'Kadmeioi', 'Kadmeiones' and 'Kadmeiai' and its walls are 'Kadmeia'.		* It is tempting to read "τεῖχος Καδμεiα" as a neuter plural constructio ad sensum, the adjective referring not to a single fortification but the famous 'walls' of the πόλις. However the accentuation indicates a singular form (nb. Billerbeck has Καδμεiῶν).
7	Καδοi	Κάδοι, πόλις Μυσίας. Στράβων ιβ' "καὶ Δορυλαίον πόλις καὶ Κάδοι". τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καδηνός.	Kadoi: a city in Mysia. Strabo, book 12: 'and the city Dorylaion, and Kadoi'. The ethnonym is 'Kadenos'.
8	Καδοῖσιοι	Καδοῖσιοι, ἔθνος μεταξύ τῆς Κασπίας θαλάσσης καὶ τοῦ Πόντου. Στράβων ἐνδεκάτῃ.	Kadousioi: a people between the Caspian Sea and the Black Sea. Strabo, book 11.

9	Κ	δρεμα	Κάδρεμα, πόλις Λυκίας, ἄποικος Ὀλβίων. ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ οἴτου φρυγμός ἢ πόλις. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καδρεμεύς.	Kadrema: a city in Lykia, a settlement of the Olbians. The city has been interpreted to mean 'roasting of grain'. The ethnonym is 'Kadremeus'.		* The association with Olbia must be that of the Olbia in Pamphylia; *Ὀλβιος, is an ethnonym: 'Olbian', common in Steph. but not found in lexica. * That this is an ethnic Lycian city originally appears to be confirmed by the etymological connection of the city's name with a Lycian term for 'roasted grain' (cf. 'xadrīna' in C. H. Melchert A Dictionary of the Lycian Language, 2004, p. 80).
10	Κ	θαια	Κάθαια, πόλις Ἰνδική. τιμῶσι δὲ τοὺς καλοὺς ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον, ὥστε βασιλεῖα τὸν κάλλιστον αἰροῦνται. ὁ πολίτης Καθαιαίος.	Kathaia: an Indian city. They honour handsome men to such a degree that they choose as king the most handsome. A citizen is a 'Kathaiaios'.
11	Και	κῖνον	Καικῖνον, χωρίον Ἰταλικόν. Φίλιστος δευτέρῳ Σικελικῶν.	Kaikinon: an Italian locality. Philistos in book 2 of his Sikelika.	* The AI changed the headword from Kaikinon to Kaikeinon.
12	Καιν	ῶνῃ	Καινίνη, πόλις Σαβίνων, ἢ ὑπὸ Ῥωμύλου ἁλοῦσα. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καινινῆται.	Kainine: a city of the Sabines, which was captured by Romulus. The ethnonym is 'Kaininetai'.
13	Καινο	ῶ	Καινοί, ἔθνος Θράκιον. Ἀπολλόδωρος ἐν χρονικῶν τετάρτῳ.	Kainoi: a Thracian people. Apollodoros in book 4 of his Chronika.
15	Καιν	ῶς	Καινύς, νῆσος πλησίον Πελωριάδος, τῆς κατὰ Σικελίαν ἄκρας, πρὸς δύσιν νεύουσα. ἔστι καὶ πόλις Ἰταλίας Καινύσιον.	Kainys: an island near Pelorias, the headland across from Sicily, bearing to the west. There is also a city in Italy, Kainysion.		* This passage is confused; Kainys is a promontory on the western tip of Calabria, Pelorias is actually a cape across the strait of Messina on the eastern tip of Sicily. * "τῆς κατὰ Σικελίαν ἄκρας": a special use of κατὰ + accusative for islands and promontories meaning 'across the coast from' (for a geographically correct usage of this term cf. κ 52)
14	Καιρ	ῶ	Καιρή, πόλις Τυρρηνίας. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καιριτανός. εἴρηται ἐν τῷ περὶ Ἀγύλλης.	Kaire: a city in Tyrrhenia. The ethnonym is 'Kairitanos'. It is cited in the work On Agylla.		* "περὶ Ἀγύλλης" - It is unclear what this is a reference to. Strabo does discuss both Kaire and Agylla in 5.2.3 but an independent work on the place Agylla appears to be being referenced here.
16	Καισ	ῶρεια	Καισάρεια, μητρόπολις τῆς Καππαδοκίας, ἢ πρὶν Εὐσέβεια καὶ Μάζακα ὡς Στράβων. ἔστι καὶ Παλαιστίνης. καὶ τρίτη πρὸς τῇ Πανεάδι. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καισαρεὺς. εἰσὶ δὲ καὶ ἄλλαι τούτῳ τῷ ὀνόματι προσαγορευόμεναι.	Kaisareia: a metropolis of Kappadokia, which was formerly 'Eusebeia' and 'Mazaka', as per Strabo. There is also one in Palaistina, and a third city near Paneas. The ethnonym is 'Kaisareus'. There are also other cities called by this name.	* The AI translation adds "Book 12" to the citation of Strabo, although no book number appears in the Greek text. The addition may derive from interference from Billerbeck's commentary or apparatus.
17	Καλαβρ	ῶα	Καλαβρία, χώρα πλησίον τῆς Ἰταλίας. ὁ οἰκῆτωρ Καλαβρός, καὶ Καλαβρά θηλυκὸν καὶ Καλαβρίς.	Kalabria: a region near Italy. An inhabitant is a 'Kalabros'; the feminine is 'Kalabra' as well as 'Kalabris'.		* Steph.'s description of Calabria as "near Italy" is intelligible only if Ἰταλία is used in its older Greek sense, where it denotes Calabria rather than the whole peninsula. The Greek term predates Latin Italia and appears, like the Latin form, to derive from Oscan. The broader meaning "Italy" became standard in the Hellenistic period.
18	Καλ	ῶθη	Καλάθη, πόλις οὐ πόρρω τῶν Ἡρακλείων στηλῶν. Ἐκαταῖος Εὐρώπῃ. "Εφορος δὲ Καλάθουσαν αὐτὴν φησιν. ἔστι καὶ τοῦ Πόντου Καλάθουσα· ὁ πολίτης τῆς Καλάθης Καλαθίνος ὡς Ἀγαθίνος, τῆς δὲ Καλαθοῦσης Καλαθοῦσιος ὡς Νύσιος.	Kalathe: a city not far from the Pillars of Herakles. Hekataios in his Europe. Ephoros says that it is 'Kalathousa'. There is also a Kalathousa on the Black Sea. A citizen of Kalathe is a 'Kalathinos' (as in 'Agathinos') and one of Kalathousa is a 'Kalathousios' (as in 'Nysios').
19	Καλ	ῶμαι	Καλάμαι, πόλις Πελοποννήσου. Πausanίας τετάρτῳ.	Kalamai: a city in the Peloponnese. Pausanias, book 4.
20	Καλαμ	ῶνθη	Καλαμένηθ, ἥ τις καὶ Καλαμίνθη, πόλις Λιβύης. Ἐκαταῖος περιηγῆσει. κρεῖττον οὖν ὡς Ἡρόδοτος διὰ τοῦ « ι » . πόλις Φοινίκων.	Kalamenthe, which some also write 'Kalaminthe': a city in Libya. Hekataios in his Periegesis. It is better, as per Herodotos, to have it with ι.	* The OCR of the Meineke text has left out the final sentence: πόλις Φοινίκων.	* Brady Kiesling has suggested emending the final line to "... [Κάλαμος] πόλις Φοινίκων". If correct, this would reveal a separate headword, Κάλαμος, referring to a Phoenician city, which appears to have become conflated with the preceding entry, Καλαμένηθ.
21	Κ	ῶλαρνα	Κάλαρνα, πόλις Μακεδονίας, ὡς Λούκιος ὁ Ταρραῖος. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλαρναῖος.	Kalarna: a city in Macedonia, as per Loukios of Tarra. The ethnonym is 'Kalarnaios'.
22	Καλ	ῶσιρις	Καλάσιρις, μοῖρα Αἰγύπτου. Ἡρόδοτος δευτέρῳ. οἱ καὶ Καλασίριοι καὶ Καλασιρίαί.	Kalasiris: a part of Egypt. Herodotos, book 2. They are 'Kalasirioi' and 'Kalasiriaí'.

23		Καλατῶναι	Καλατίαι, γένος Ἰνδικόν. Ἑκαταῖος Ἀσίᾱ.	Kalatiai: an Indian people. Hekataios in his Asia.
24		Καλαῖρεια	Καλαύρεια, νησίδιον πρὸς τῇ Κρήτῃ, [κύκλον ἔχουσα] ὅσον τριάκοντα σταδίων, ἀπὸ Καλαύρου τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος. ἔκαλετο καὶ Εἰρήνη· ὁ πολίτης Καλαυρεΐτης.	Kalaureia: a small island near Crete, [with a circumference] of about thirty stades; after Kalauros, son of Poseidon. It used to also be called 'Eirene'. A citizen is a 'Kalaureites'.
25		Κῶλβιος	Κάλβιος, κρήνη Λυκίας, ἣν καὶ Καλαινόν φασι. τινὲς δὲ αὐτὴν καὶ διὰ τοῦ « μ » φασί.	Kalbios: a fountain in Lykia, which they also say is 'Kalainos'. Some also say that it is with μ.		* The reference to pronunciation "with μ" concerns the basic form Κάλβιος, i.e. a pronunciation equivalent to "Kalmios".
26		Καλὴ ἀκτὴ	Καλὴ ἀκτὴ, πόλις Σικελῶν. Εὐδοξος τετάρτῳ γῆς περιόδου. ἔστι δὲ [ὡς] Μεγάλῃ κῶμῃ. ἐκ τῶν δύο δὲ ἡ παραγωγή, Μεγαλοκωμῆτης Καλακτίτης ἢ Καλοακτίτης διὰ τοῦ « ι »· ἐπεὶ καὶ παρὰ τὸ Ἀκτὴ Ἀκτίτης [καὶ Ἀττικός· Ἀκτὴ γὰρ ἡ Ἀττική]. ἢ Καλοακταῖος καὶ Καλοακταία θηλυκόν, ἢ Καλοάκτιος ὡς Πανάκτιος καὶ ἐπάκτιος.	Kale Akte: a city of the Sikels. Eudoxos, in the fourth book of his Circuit of the Earth. It is like 'Megale Kome'. From both are derived 'Megalokometes', and 'Kalaktites' and 'Kaloaktites' (with ι), since 'Aktites' derives from the form 'Akte' (as well as 'Attikos', because 'Akte' is actually Attika). Alternatively there is 'Kaloaktaios' and the feminine 'Kaloaktaia', or 'Kaloaktios' (as in 'Panaktios' and 'epaktios').	* The AI has misread 'ἔστι δὲ [ὡς] Μεγάλῃ κῶμῃ', treating Μεγάλῃ κῶμῃ as a common noun phrase "a large village". Μεγὰλῃ Κῶμῃ is a proper noun, so the sense is "It is like 'Megale Kome'", referring to the formation of the name Kale Akte.	* "ἐκ τῶν δύο δὲ ἡ παραγωγή" - δύο for ἄμφω, with the Nom./Acc. form in place of δυοῖν as it must be co-ordinated with τῶν.
27		Κῶλῃρος	Κάληρος, οὕτως ἔκαλετο ἡ Ἀλωπεκόννησος ἀπὸ Καλήρου βασιλέως, Ἀλωπεκόννησος δὲ ὅτι ἐκεῖ εἶδον σκύμνους φέρουσιν καὶ κατατιθεῖσιν ἀλώπεκα. τινὲς δ' ὅτι δεκάληρος ἔκαλετο ἡ πόλις.	Kaleros: this used to be what Alopekonesos was called, after the king Kaleros; it is now 'Alopekonesos' because they saw a fox carry her cubs there and put them down. Some say that the city used to be called 'Dekalaros'.	* The AI translation appears to have taken the initial Δε- of Δεκάληρος as the particle δέ, producing the form "Kalaros". The altered vowel may reflect an attempt to avoid redundancy with the headword.
28		Καλησῖα	Καλησία, πόλις Αὔσονική. Διονύσιος πεντακαίδεκάτῳ Ῥωμαϊκῆς ἀρχαιολογίας. τὸ ἔθνικόν Καλησιανός, ὡς αὐτός.	Kalesia: an Ausonian city. Dionysios, in book 15 of his Roman Antiquities. The ethnonym is 'Kalesianos', as per Dionysios.
29		Καλλῆτιβος	Καλλάτηβος, πόλις Λυδίας. Ἡρόδοτος ἐβδόμῃ. τὸ ἔθνικόν Καλλάτηβιος.	Kallatebos: a city in Lydia. Herodotos, book 7. The ethnonym is 'Kallatebios'.
30		Κῶλλατις	Κάλλατις, πολίχινον ἐν τῇ παραλίᾳ τοῦ Πόντου, Στράβων ἐβδόμῃ. ὡς κάλαθος εὐρέθῃ οἰκῶς τοῖς θεσμοφοριακοῖς. ὁ πολίτης Καλλατιανός, ὡς Τραλλιανός Σαρδιανός· ἀφ' οὗ Ἰστρος Καλλατιανός περὶ τραγωδίας γράψας καλὸν βιβλίον. ἔοικε δ' εἶναι ἀπὸ τοῦ Καλλατία ὡς Ὀλβιανός, εἰ μὴ ἀπὸ τῆς ἰωνικῆς γενικῆς γέγονε τῆς Καλλάτιος.	Kallatis: a small city on the coast of the Black Sea. Strabo, book 7. Because a basket similar to that which is 'Thesmophorian' was found there. A citizen is a 'Kallatianos' (just like 'Trallianos', 'Sardianos'), as per Istros Kallatianos who wrote a fine book about tragedy. It looks like it is from 'Kallatia' (as in 'Olbianos'); unless it has emerged from the Ionic genitive 'Kallatios'.	* The AI's translation must have used Billerbeck's German text for its translation of θεσμοφοριακοῖς ('similar to one used at the Thesmophoria') as it has no lexica to refer to. * The AI has confused the translation of the phrase ἀφ' οὗ Ἰστρος Καλλατιανός· ἀφ' οὗ either refers back to πολίχινον (not Τραλλιανός), giving the sense "from which (i.e. Kallatis) Istros Kallatianos (came)," or οὗ is neuter with an omitted antecedent, meaning literally "the thing from which Istros Kallatianos also is". The latter fits the context as Stephanos is listing examples of people who are named with this ethnonym.	*This appears to be a more heavily redacted passage, especially notable with the explanatory etymology ('Κάλλατις' viz. κάλαθος) introduced by the abrupt ὡς ('because...'), which Billerbeck's edition has replaced with ἐν ᾧ. * 'θεσμοφοριακοῖς' is a hapax legomenon; it has escaped notice by all major lexica and has no gloss or definition. Although its connection is to the Thesmophoria is clear, without more lexicographical data it's difficult to pin down a strong translation. * Steph.'s comment about the "ἰωνικῆς γενικῆς" form is technically wrong; this is a Hellenistic genitive ending found in -ις nouns which also, but not exclusively, manifested in Ionic speaking areas.
31		Καλλῖαι	Καλλίαι, πόλις μία τῆς ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ τριπόλεως. ὁ πολίτης Καλλιεύς, ὡς Πausανίας. ἔστι καὶ χωρίον πλησίον Τάραντος.	Kalliai: a city, one of the Tripolis in Arkadia. A citizen is a 'Kallieus', as per Pausanias. There also is a locality near Taras.
32		Καλλῖαρος	Καλλιάρος, πόλις Λοκρῶν, ἀπὸ Καλλιάρου τοῦ Ὀδοιδόκου καὶ Λαονόμης, ὡς Ἑλλάνικος ἐν πρώτῃ Δευκαλιωνείας, Στράβων δ' ἐν ἐνάτῃ παρὰ τὸ εὐήροτον αὐτὴν εἶναι φησι. Καλλιᾶρα, οὐδετέρως. τὸ ἔθνικόν Καλλιαρεῖς ὡς Μεγαρεῖς.	Kalliaros: a city of the Lokrians; after Kalliaros son of Hodoidokos and Laonome, as per Hellanikos in book 1 of his Deukalioneia; but Strabo in book 9 says it derives from it being easy to plough. 'Kalliara' in the neuter. The ethnonym is 'Kalliareis', as in 'Megareis'.
33		Καλλῖοπη	Καλλίοπη, πόλις Παρθυαίων. Πολύβιος δεκάτῳ. τὸ ἔθνικόν Καλλιοπεύς, ὡς Παρθενόπῃ Παρθενοπεύς.	Kalliope: a city of the Parthians. Polybios, book 10. The ethnonym is 'Kalliopeus', just as 'Parthenopeus' is from Parthenope.		* 'Παρθενόπῃ' is a quasi-pendent nominative, contextually an eytmon of 'Παρθενοπεύς'. * Παρθυαῖος is used here, a Postclassical variant of Πάρθος primarily found in Strabo and Plutarch (cf. κ 109 Κάσπειρος)

34	Καλλιπολις	Καλλιπολις, πολίχιον Λαμφάκου ἐν τῇ περαιᾷ τῆς Χερρονήσου ἐπὶ ἄκτῃς κειμένη, ὡς Ἀλέξανδρος ἐν τῷ περὶ Βιθυνίας, δευτέρα κατὰ τὸν Ἀνάπλου, τρίτη πόλις Σικελίας, τετάρτη πόλις Καρίας· οἱ πολῖται πασῶν Καλλιπολῖται.	Kallipolis: a town of Lampsakos situated on a headland on the further bank of the Chersonese, as per Alexander in his On Bithynia. (2) Along the Anaplous. (3) A city in Sicily. (4) A city in Karia. The citizens of all are 'Kallipolitai'.	* "κατὰ τὸν Ἀνάπλου": The AI translation interpreted Ἀνάπλους as the title of a work, namely Dionysios of Byzantion's Anaplous of the Bosphoros. While this text survives, no Kallipolis is attested in it, making this almost certainly a misidentification. Here κατὰ τὸν Ἀνάπλου is locative rather than referential, κατὰ meaning "along" or "downstream". The phrase therefore means "Along the Anaplous", not "According to the Anaplous". The grammatical form itself points in this direction, since the article is masculine (τὸν) rather than the feminine one expected if Ἀνάπλους referred to a literary work.	* Place number (2) appears to be heavily truncated. The original text probably contained a phrase such as [ἔστι καὶ ἐτέρᾳ] κατὰ τὸν Ἀνάπλου, indicating another place of the same name. Here Ἀνάπλους is likely not the title of a work but a geographical designation referring to a stretch of the Bosphoros. Compare Pseudo-Skylax, who uses the term in precisely this sense: "Καλεῖται δὲ Ἀνάπλους ὁ τόπος ἀνὰ Βόσπορον μέχρι ἂν ἔλθῃς ἐφ' ἱερὸν" ("The region along the Bosphoros as far as the Hieron is called the Anaplous").
35	Κάλπη	Κάλπη, πόλις Βιθυνῶν. Θεόπομπος ὁγδόῳ Ἑλληνικῶν. ἔστι καὶ λιμὴν Κάλπης· τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλπεύς ὡς Σινωπεύς. καὶ Καλπῖνος ἔστιν ὡς Πεύκη Πευκίνος. τοῦ δὲ λιμένος ὡς Καλπολιμενίτης. καὶ τὴν πόλιν Κάρπειαν τινὲς τούτους Καρπητανούς ὡς Καλπειανούς φασι.	Kalpe: a city of the Bithynians. Theopompos, in book 8 of his Hellenika. There is also a harbour of Kalpe. The ethnonym is 'Kalpeus', as in 'Sinopeus'. And there is also 'Kalpinos', just as 'Peukinos' is from 'Peuke'. And the harbour's is thus: 'Kalpolimenites'. ... and the city Karpeia ... some say that these are 'Karpetanoi', as in 'Kalpeiano'.		* 'Πεύκη' is a quasi-pendent nominative, contextually functioning as an eytmon of 'Πευκίνος'.
36	Καλύβη	Καλύβη, πόλις Θράκης, ἄποικος Μακεδόνων. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλυβῖται ἢ Καλυβεῖς, ὡς τῆς Ἀλύβης Ἀλυβεῖς.	Kalybe: a city in Thrace, a settlement of the Macedonians. The ethnonym is 'Kalybitai' or 'Kalybeis', just as 'Alybeis' is from the form 'Alybe'.
37	Κάλυδνα	Κάλυδνα, νῆσος. καὶ πόλις Θήβης, ἀπὸ Καλῶδνου παιδὸς Οὐρανοῦ. λέγεται καὶ Καλυδνός· ὁ πολῖτης Καλυδναῖος, καὶ Καλυδνίς τὸ θηλυκόν, καὶ Καλυδνεύς ὁ Ἀπόλλων καὶ Καλῶνιος, ὡς Ἀνδροτίων ἔκτῃ Ἀτθίδος.	Kalydna: an island. Also a city of Thebes, after Kalydnos son of Ouranos. It is also called 'Kalydnos'; a citizen is a 'Kalydnaios', and the feminine is 'Kalydnis'; Apollo too is 'Kalydneus' and 'Kalydnios', as per Androtion in book 6 of his Atthis.
38	Καλυδών	Καλυδών, Αἰτωλίας πόλις, ἀπὸ Καλυδῶνος τοῦ Ἐνδυμῖωνος ἢ τοῦ Αἰτωλοῦ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλυδῶνιος καὶ Καλυδωνία.	Kalydon: a city in Aitolia, either after Kalydon son of Endymion or after Aitolos. The ethnonyms are 'Kalydonios' and 'Kalydonia'.
39	Κάλυμνα	Κάλυμνα, νῆσος, ἦν ὁ Σκήψιος πληθυντικῶς Καλύμνας φησί. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλύμνιος, ὡς Στράβων δεκάτῳ τὸ Καλύμνιον μέλι ἐκεῖ εἶναι φησι. λέγεται καὶ Καλυμνία. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλυμνιάτης.	Kalymna: an island, which the Skepsian refers to in the plural as 'Kalymnai'. The ethnonym is 'Kalymnios', as Strabo in book 10 says that Kalymnian honey is from there. It is also called 'Kalymnia'. The ethnonym is 'Kalymniates'.		* The "Skepsian" is Demetrius of Scepsis, the second-century BCE grammarian and antiquarian, who is frequently referred to simply as ὁ Σκήψιος in Strabo.
40	Κάλυνδα	Κάλυνδα, πόλις Καρίας, ὡς Καρύανδα. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καλυνδεύς. Ἡρόδοτος ὁγδόῃ.	Kalynda: a city in Karia, as in 'Karyanda'. The ethnonym is 'Kalyndeus'. Herodotos, book 8.
41	Κάλυτις	Κάλυτις, πόλις Συρίας. Ἡρόδοτος δευτέρα. ὁ οἰκίτηρ Καλυτίτης, καὶ τὸ θηλυκὸν Καλυτίς, διὰ τὸ προεληφθαι τὸν χαρακτήρα.	Kalytis: a city in Syria. Herodotos, book 2. An inhabitant is a 'Kalytites'; the feminine is also 'Kalytis' due to the form having been already taken.		* The final remark on the feminine form is prompted by the morphology of Καλύτις, whose nominative already contains the regular third-declension feminine ending -ις. Note however the different accentuation of the two otherwise homophonous words.
48	Κάμιρος	Κάμιρος, πόλις ἐν Ῥόδῳ, ἀπὸ τοῦ παιδὸς Κερκάφου τοῦ Ἡλιάδου καὶ Κυδίπτης. ἀπὸ Κερκάφου δὲ αἱ Ῥόδια γυναῖκες Κερκαφίδες. ἦσαν δὲ τρεῖς, ὡς Ὅμηρος φησι "Λίνδον Ἥλυσόν τε καὶ ἀργινόνεττα Κάμιρον". ὁ πολῖτης Καμιρεύς. Πείσανδρος ὁ διασημότατος ποιητὴς Καμιρεύς ἦν. λέγεται καὶ Καμιρίτης καὶ Καμιραῖος, καὶ θηλυκῶς.	Kamiros: a city on Rhodes, after the son of Kerkaphos the Heliad and Kydippe. Rhodian women are 'Kerkaphides' after Kerkaphos. There were three, as Homer says: 'Lindos and Ielysos and gleaming white Kamiros'. A citizen is a 'Kamireus'. Peisandros, the renowned poet, was 'Kamireus'. 'Kamirites' and 'Kamiraios', in the feminine too, are also said.	* The AI renders διασημότατος as "most renowned", but the superlative is elative in force. The translation therefore adopts the simpler rendering "renowned".
51	Κάναθα	Κάναθα, πόλις πρὸς τῇ Βόστρᾳ Ἀραβίας. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καναθηνός. ἐν τισι δὲ καὶ διὰ τοῦ « ι » γράφεται.	Kanatha: a city near Bostra in Arabia. The ethnonym is 'Kanathenos'. It is written with ι by some.
52	Κάνναι	Κάναϊ, πολίχιον [Εὐβοϊκὸν ἢ] Λοκρῶν τῶν ἐκ Κύνου κατὰ τὰ ἄκρα τῆς Λέσβου. ἔστι καὶ ὄρος Κάνη καὶ πόλις καὶ λιμνὴ. ἔστι καὶ πόλις τῆς Τρωάδος. Καναῖος Ζεὺς οὐ μόνον ἀπὸ τοῦ Καναίου, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς Κάνης.	Kanai: a town, [Euboian or] of the Lokrians from Kynos, opposite the headlands of Lesbos. There is also a Mount Kane, and a city and a harbour. There is also a city in the Troad. Strabo, book 13. There is also Kannai, with double 'vv', near Karchedon. The ethnonym is 'Kanaïos' and 'Kanaia'. There is also a city Kanai on the river Tigris. Zeus Kanaïos is not only from the form 'Kanaïos', but also from the form 'Kane'.	* The AI rendered 'εἰσὶ καὶ Κάνναι διὰ δύο « νν »' as 'there are also Kannai...'. Κάνναι is pluralia tantum (such as Αἰθναί); it governs plural verbs but must be translated as singular in English.	* "κατὰ τὰ ἄκρα τῆς Λέσβου": a specialised use of κατὰ with the accusative in geographical descriptions, particularly of islands and headlands, meaning "across the coast from" or "opposite".

53	Κ	ἱναστρον	Κάναστρον, ἄκρον Θράκης καὶ Μακεδονίας. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καναστραῖος. Σοφοκλῆς δὲ ὑπονηματίζει τὰ ἀργοναυτικά "Καναστραῖον" φησὶν "ἀκρωτήριον τῆς Παλλήνης". ἀλλ' ἐναντιοῦται τὰ ἐθνικά, εἰ μὴ καὶ τοῦτο ἐκλάβοιμεν παραπλησίως τῷ Λέχαιον καὶ Λεχαιοῖς, καὶ Λύκειον τὸ γυμνάσιον καὶ Λυκεῖος Ἀπόλλων, καὶ Νύμφαιον καὶ Νυμφαῖος.	Kanastron: a cape of Thrace and Macedonia. The ethnonym is 'Kanastraïos', but Sophokles has 'Kanastraion' in his commentary on The Argonautika, saying it is 'a cape of Pallene'. However, the ethnonyms run contrary to this, unless we were to understand this as having the same pattern as 'Lechaion' and 'Lechaïos', 'Lykeion' (the gymnasium) and Apollo 'Lykeios', or 'Nymphaion' and 'Nymphaïos'.	* ὑπονηματίζει τὰ ἀργοναυτικά - The AI had 'commenting on the Argonautic material'; it got confused as to what to do with 'τὰ ἀργοναυτικά' as Meineke usually doesn't capitalise the names of books.	* The Λύκειον τὸ γυμνάσιον referred to here is of course the Lyceum in Athens.
63	Κ	ἱνωπος	Κάνωπος, οὕτως ἔδει γράφεσθαι [διὰ τοῦ « π »· γράφεται δὲ ὁμως] διὰ τοῦ « β ». Στράβων ἐπτακαίδεκάτῃ "Κάνωβος δ' ἔστι πόλις ἐν εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν σταδίοις ἀπὸ Ἀλεξανδρείας περὶ Ἰοῦσιν, ἀπὸ Κανώβου κυβερνήτου Μενελάου, ἀποθανόντος αὐτόθι". καὶ ἱερὸν Ποσειδῶνος Κανώβου. καὶ νῆσος. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κανωβίτης, καὶ τὸ κτητικὸν Κανωβικός, καὶ Κανωβικὴ διώρυξ καὶ τὸ Κανωβικὸν στόμα. καὶ Κανωβίς θηλυκόν. ἔστι καὶ λιβύτης τόπος Κάνωπος.	Kanopos: it should be written like this, with π; but it is written nonetheless with β. Strabo, book 17: 'Kanobos is a city one hundred and twenty stades from Alexandria for those going by foot; after Kanobos, the helmsman of Menelaos, who died there.' There is also a sanctuary of Poseidon Kanobos; and an island. The ethnonym is 'Kanobites' and the possessive adjective 'Kanobikos', as in the 'Kanobike' canal and the 'Kanobikon' mouth. The feminine is 'Kanobis'. There is also Kanopos, a place in Libya.
66	Κ	απετῖλιον	Καπετώλιον, ἐν Ῥώμῃ λόφος Ταρπαῖος πάλαι λεγόμενος. περὶ δὲ τῆς γραφῆς τοῦ τεμενικοῦ ὁ Εὐδαίμων διὰ τοῦ « ι » φησὶν "Εἰρηναῖος προπαροξύνει διὰ τοῦ « ι » γράφων". Ἀσκληπιεῖον, Ἀσκληπιός γάρ· Πτολεμαεῖον, Πτολεμαῖος γάρ· Ὀλυμπιεῖα τὰ Ἀθήνησιν, Ὀλύμπιος γάρ. τὸ δὲ τέμενος Καπετώλιον καὶ Καπετώλιος Ζεὺς διὰ τοῦ « ι ». τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καπετωλῖνος.	Kapetolion: in Rome, a hill that was long ago called 'Tarpaios'. Regarding the spelling of the sanctuary name, Eudaimon says that it is with ι: 'Eirenaïos accents it with acute on the antepenult and writes it with ι.' Herodian has 'Kapetolieion' with six syllables, and 'Kapetolion' with contraction. The form 'Kapetoleia', referring to the games, is accented with circumflex on the penult. This is because forms whose base already ends in postvocalic -ος—when either a single ι is in the penultimate position or α precedes it so that the diphthong αι stands before the ultima—will be accented with a circumflex on the penult, and the same applies to possessive forms. Asklepieion (Ἀσκληπιεῖον) is thus from 'Asklepios' (Ἀσκληπιός); Ptolemaeion (Πτολεμαεῖον) is thus from 'Ptolemaios' (Πτολεμαῖος); Olympieia (Ὀλυμπιεῖα), the one at Athens, is thus from 'Olympios' (Ὀλύμπιος). The sanctuary, however, is 'Kapetolion' (Καπετώλιον), and 'Zeus Kapetolios' (Καπετώλιος), with ι. The ethnonym is 'Kapetoliinos'.	* Scholarly v_1, v_2 and v_3 did not make factual errors in their translation of the philological analysis here - although all want to translate '« ος » καθαρὸν' as 'pure ος'. Note, Billerbeck has "welches vor der Endung -ος 'vokalisch ist"	* τεμενικός is a late, extremely rare word. LSJ cites Stephanus as evidence for the sense "temple name". * "« ος » καθαρὸν": Cf. Dionysius Thrax's discussion of verbal conjugation classes: ἡ δὲ ἑκτη διὰ καθαροῦ τοῦ ὠ, οἶον ἱππεύω, πλέω, βασιλεύω (Hilgard 14.16–17). There, διὰ καθαροῦ τοῦ ὠ refers to the verbal ending -ω when it is not followed by a consonantal element. Stephanus uses ὁς καθαρὸν in the same way, of second-declension nominatives in which -ος is preceded by a vowel (Ἀσκληπιός, Πτολεμαῖος, Ὀλύμπιος, and Καπετώλιος). * 'Πτολεμαῖος' and 'Ὀλύμπιος' are quasi-pendent nominatives, contextually functioning as etymons of 'Πτολεμαεῖον' and 'Ὀλυμπιεῖα', respectively.
68	Κ	απαδοκῖα	Καππαδοκία, χώρα τῇ Κιλικίᾳ πρόσχωρος, ὥς φησι Μένιππος "ἀπὸ Σινώπης εἰς Εὐάρχον ποταμόν, ὃς ὀρίζει Παφλαγονίαν καὶ Καππαδοκίαν ...". τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καππάδοξ καὶ Καππάδοκος. καὶ Καππαδόκης· Ἡρόδοτος δὲ φησιν. ὁ κτιστὴς Καππάδοκος εἰρήται ὑπὸ Μενάνδρου. λέγεται καὶ Καππαδόκισσα, ὥς Αἰθιοπίσση καὶ πανδόκισσα. διήρητο δ' οὐχ ὥς νῦν εἰς πρώτην καὶ δευτέραν, ἀλλ' εἰς μείζονα καὶ ἐλάττωνα, καὶ μικρὰν καὶ μεγάλην.	Kappadokia: a region bordering Kilikia, as Menippos says: 'from Sinope to the River Euarchos, which forms the border between Paphlagonia and Kappadokia...'. The ethnonym is 'Kappadox' and 'Kappadokos'; also 'Kappadokes', as Herodotos says. The founder, Kappadokos, is mentioned by Menander. 'Kappadokissa' is also said, like 'Aithiopissa' and 'pandokissa'. Previously it was not divided, as now, into 'First' and 'Second', but into 'Greater' and 'Lesser', and 'Small' and 'Big'.	* The AI translation misidentifies a number of ethnonyms as titles of works, rendering forms such as Kappadox, Kappadokissa, and Aithiopissa in italics rather than as lexical forms. These are ethnonyms, not book titles.	* πανδόκισσα is essentially a hapax legomenon, occurring only in Stephanus of Byzantium before being repeated by later lexicographers, most notably the Etymologicum Magnum. The word is generally taken to be equivalent to πανδοκεύτρια ("female innkeeper" or "hostess"), a formation from πανδοκεύς ("innkeeper") with the feminine suffix -ισσα.
75	Κ	αρδαμῖλη	Καρδαμύλη, [πόλις Μεσσηνίας.] Ὀμηρος "Καρδαμύλην Ἐνόπην τε". Ἡρόδοτος δὲ Λακ ^{◆◆} νικὴν αὐτὴν φησιν. ἔοικε δ' ἑτέρα εἶναι πλησίον Χίου. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καρδαμυλίτης ὥς Σινωπίτης. παρὰ δὲ τῶν ἐγγχωρίων Σκαρδαμυλίτης λέγεται. ἔστι δὲ καὶ Καρδαμυλησός κώμη.	Kardamyle: [a city in Messenia.] Homer: 'Kardamyle and Enope'. Herodotos says that it is Lakonian. There appears to be another one near Chios. The ethnonym is 'Kardamylites', as in 'Sinopites'. It is called 'Skardamylites' among the locals. There is also a village Kardamylissos.	* Despite a Unicode error in the OCR of Meineke's text, the machine successfully recovered the corrupted form "Lakonike". However, it then misinterpreted the word as a proper noun rather than the ethnic adjective "Lakonian". * The AI translation renders η as ι in the name Καρδαμυλησός (Kardamylissos), apparently under the influence of Modern Greek pronunciation.

Καρίς δὲ ἐλέγετο ἡ Κῶς, ὡς Ἑλλάνικος. ἔστι καὶ Φρυγίας πόλις Καρίς καὶ Καρίδες, τὸ ἔθνικόν Καριδεύς ὡς Ἀρκαδεύς, τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς τέχνης Καρίτης. τῶν Καρῶν τὸ κτητικὸν Καρικὸς. Ἡρόδοτος ἐν πρώτῃ "τὸ Καρικὸν ἔθνος δοκιμώτατον".	Karia: the country. The ethnonym is 'Kar', homonymous with the founder. According to the grammatical rule the feminine is ['Kaira', also with hiatus] 'Kaïra'. The common usage, however, is with the diphthong ει. Apollonios says that it is with long ι, as per book 5 of his On Modifications of Forms and in his On Genders. The lengthening is necessary because of the penult, for words ending in short α when modified in form lengthen their penult either by nature or by position. While Herodian says that this is doubtful in his Orthography (and in his General Prosody he says that it uses the diphthong following the common usage), he does say when commenting on Apollonios' On Genders that it is with long ι: 'for there is occasion when lengthening occurs after diresis: 'oiomai' (οἶομαι), 'oigon' (οἶγον), 'oïda' (οἶδα) among the Aiolians rather than 'oïda' (οἶδα). The common usage, however, is with the diphthong, according to the analogy of 'soteira', 'oleteira.' 'Karios' is also said, for Zeus is honoured in this way among the Mylasians. The feminine is 'Karia'. The acropolis of Megara also used to be called Karia, after Kar, son of Phoroneus, and an inhabitant is a 'Karios'. There is also 'Karine'. There is also 'Kariates'. There is also 'Kariatís' as well as 'Karis', from the genitive of Kar. Kos also used to be called 'Karis', as per Hellanikos. There is also a city in Phrygia: 'Karis' and 'Karides'. The ethnonym is 'Karideus' (as in 'Arkideus'); the form according to the grammatical rule is 'Karites'. The possessive for the Karians is 'Karikos'. Herodotos in book 1: 'The Karikos people are most esteemed.'	* The AI translation breaks down completely in the discussion beginning ἔστι γὰρ ὅτε μετὰ τὴν διαίρεσιν ἑκτασίς γίνεταί. The passage concerns the orthographic relationship between spellings with the diphthong οι and those with long ο, a metalinguistic distinction that the translation repeatedly fails to capture. * "τέχνης...": The AI translation of "craft" is misleading. In grammatical contexts τέχνη denotes the grammatical art or technical tradition (cf. κ294 Κυρταία).	* "ἐκτείνει τὴν παραλήγουσαν φύσει ἢ θέσει": here φύσει and θέσει are technical grammatical terms denoting syllables that are long by nature (through vowel quantity or diphthong) or long by position (through a following consonant cluster). Cf. Dionysius Thrax and the discussion in Roszbach and Westphal, Metrik der Griechen, ii, p. 74.
97	Καρπασίᾱ		Καρπασία, πόλις Κύπρου, ἣν Πυγμαλίων ἐκτίσεν, ὡς Ἑλλάνικος ἐν τοῖς Κυπριακοῖς. Διονύσιος δὲ διὰ διφθόγγου Κραπάσειαν αὐτὴν φησιν ἐν τρίτῳ Βασσαρικῶν "ἡδ' ὅποσοι Κινύρειον ἰδ' αἰπεινὴν Κραπάσειαν". ἔστι καὶ νῆσος Καρπασία κατὰ τὴν ἄκραν τὴν Σαρπηδονίαν. Ξεναγόρας δὲ Κάρπαθον αὐτὴν φησι. Δημήτριος δ' ὁ Σαλαμίνιος Καρβασίαν φησὶν, ὅτι πρὸς τὸν καλούμενον κάρβαν ἄνεμον κεῖσθαι δοκεῖ. ὁ πολίτης Καρπασεώτης ὡς Μαρεώτης. καὶ τὸ κτητικὸν Καρπασεωτικὸς καὶ Καρπασεωτικὴ ἄκρα. Dionysios, however, says it is 'Krapaseia', with a diphthong, in book 3 of his Bassarika: 'and behold those [who live in] Kinyreion and steep Krapaseia'. There is also a Karpasia island, opposite the Sarpedonian promontory, but Xenagoras says that it is 'Karpathos'. Demetrios of Salamis says it is 'Karbasia', because it seems to be situated facing the wind called 'Karbas'. A citizen is a 'Karpaseotes', as in 'Mareotes'. The possessive is 'Karpaseotikos', and there is also a 'Karpaseotic' promontory. Theopompós calls them 'Karpaseis' in book 10, perhaps from Karpasos (as 'Antiocheus' is from Antiochos), after whom is 'Karpaseia'.		* "νῆσος Καρπασία κατὰ τὴν ἄκραν τὴν Σαρπηδονίαν": a special use of κατὰ + accusative for islands and promontories meaning 'across the coast from' * "ὅτι πρὸς τὸν καλούμενον κάρβαν ἄνεμον κεῖσθαι δοκεῖ": πρὸς with the accusative of a wind denotes orientation, "facing" or "towards" that direction. Κάρβας is the Cyrenaican name for the east wind, equivalent to Εὖρος according to Aristotle (Vent. 973b4).
99	Καρπιῷσιοι		Καρπηῖσιοι, ἔθνος Ἰβηρικὸν τῶν ἐκτὸς Ἰβηρος ποταμοῦ.	Karpesioi: an Iberian people amongst those beyond the river Iber.	* The AI translation unnecessarily Latinises the river name as Iberos, obscuring its actual morphology. The nominative is the third-declension form Iber, not a second-declension Iberos (cf. Latin Iberus).	* The genitive τῶν ἐκτὸς Ἰβηρος ποταμοῦ could be interpreted partitively, yielding the sense 'of those who are beyond the river Iber'. Since Stephanus' text is heavily abridged, however, it is equally possible that a noun such as χωρία has been omitted, giving the meaning "in the regions beyond the river Iber".
102	Καρῖανδα		Καρύανδα, πόλις καὶ λιμὴν ὁμώνυμος πλησίον Μύνδου καὶ Κῶ. Ἑκαταῖος Καρύανδαν αὐτὴν φησι. τὸ ἔθνικόν Καρυανδεύς ὡς Ἀλαβανδεύς. ἐντέϋθεν ἦν καὶ Σκύλαξ ὁ παλαιὸς λογογράφος.	Karyanda: a city and a harbour of the same name, near Myndos and Kos. Hekataios says that it is 'Karyanda'. The ethnonym is 'Karyandeus', as in 'Alabandeus'. Skylax, the ancient logographer, was from here.	* "Ἑκαταῖος Καρύανδαν αὐτὴν φησί": the AI translation interprets αὐτὴν as referring to an implied feminine form of the name. The Greek is not so clear. Hekataios may simply be stating that the city (or harbour) itself is called Καρύανδα, with Stephanus citing him as authority for the form.

Karystos: a city beneath Mount Oche in Euboia. After Karystos, son of Cheiron. Theodoridas says that it is 'Cheironia'. The city is situated near the Myrtoan Sea beneath Mount Oche. The mountain was named [after the mating that occurs there, either] from the intercourse of the gods Zeus and Hera, or because sheep conceive there when they copulate. For the Achaians say 'oche' for fodder. 'Oches' is also said in the masculine. In this city there is 'a stone that is carded and woven, so that the woven products are made into towels; when soiled they are thrown into the fire and they are cleansed of their dirt, in a manner similar to washing'. It used to be named 'Aigaia' after Aigaion who ruled there, from whom is also the Aegean Sea. There is also a place called Karystos in Aigys towards Arkadia, from which Alkman says Karystion wine comes, according to Strabo, book 10. The ethnonym of the former is 'Karystios'; 'in which is the quarry of the Karystian columns'. The feminine is 'Karystia'.	* The AI translation omits the bracketed text [ἐκεῖ ὀχείας, ἥτοι] found in Meineke's edition, yet translates <ἡ διὰ τὴν τροφὴν>, which Meineke does not print. It thus disregards part of the edited text while incorporating a reading absent from it. * The machine translation renders spatial prepositional phrases inconsistently. In geographical descriptions, ὑπὸ with the dative denotes location "under" or "beneath" something, not "on" it, while πρὸς with the dative means "near" or "by", not "on".	* "Ἀχαιοὶ τὴν τροφὴν ὀχῇν φασι": the "Achaeans" referred to here are the inhabitants of Achaia in the north-western Peloponnese, not the Greeks in general. Cf. Hesychius s.v. Ἀχαιοί: οἱ Ἑλληνες· κυρίως δὲ Ἀχαιοὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες μέρος τι τοῦ Πελοποννήσου. Stephanus is clearly using the term in the latter sense in his discussion of Ὀχη. Appeals to the speech of the Achaeans are not uncommon in ancient lexicography: Hesychius, for example, attributes καιρότερον (for Attic ἐνωρότερον), κεφαλίδας (for Attic κόρσαι), and σιαλῖς (for Attic βλέννος) to the local dialect of the Achaeans.

Karchedon: a metropolis in Libya, a most renowned city. 'Chalkedon', in Bithynia, is with λκ. After Karchedon, a Phoenician. It was also called 'New City' and 'Kadmeia' and 'Oinousa' and 'Kakkabe'—in their local dialect this means 'horse's head.' There is also another Karchedon, a city in Iberia, and it too used to be called 'New City'. There is also a Karchedon in Armenia, as Eutropios says. A citizen; 'Karchedonios, the wise Mago' and 'Kleitomachos son of Diognetos, who was called Hasdrubas, was a philosopher of the Academy, successor to the teachings of Karneades the Kyrenean; who at twenty-eight years old came to Athens lacking the basic rudiments and, while learning them, attended the lectures of Karneades.'	* The AI renders διασημώτατος as "most renowned", but the superlative is elative in force. The translation therefore adopts the simpler rendering "renowned".	* The final passage is obscure. Meineke's text treats the remarks concerning certain famous Karchedonians as two direct quotations, presumably of Eutropius (cf. 3.15.3). Billerbeck instead posits a lacuna, printing Καρχηδόنيος <> σοφὸς Μάγων καὶ Κλειτόμαχος and dispensing with quotation marks, thereby producing a more coherent text. Since the present translation follows Meineke's edition, the transmitted reading has been retained.
105		Κάσιον	Κάσιον, ὄρος καὶ πόλις Αἰγύπτου πρὸς τῷ Πηλουσίῳ. ἐκλήθη δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Κυκλάδος νήσου ἢ ἀπὸ Κάσου τοῦ Κλεόχου, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ Κασίου Διὸς ἱερὸν. ὁ πολὶτης Κασιώτης ὡς Πηλουσιώτης, καὶ θηλυκὸν Κασιώτις, καὶ τὸ κτητικὸν Κασιωτικός, ἀφ' οὗ ἐν τῇ συνήθειᾳ τὰ Κασιωτικὰ ἱμάτια.	Kasion: a mountain and city in Egypt near Pelousion. It was named after the Cycladic island, or after Kasos son of Kleochos, after whom the sanctuary of Zeus is also named. A citizen is a 'Kasiotes' (as in 'Pelousiotes') and the feminine is 'Kasiotis'. The possessive is 'Kasiotikos', hence the term 'Kasiotic cloaks' in everyday language.		* Cf. the entry Κάσιος (κ 107).
107		Κάσιος	Κάσιος, μία τῶν Κυκλάδων. "οἱ δ' ἄρα Νίσυρόν τ' εἶχον Κράπαθόν τε Κάσον τε". ἐκαλεῖτο δ' Ἄμφη καὶ Ἀστράβη· κέκληται δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ Κάσου τοῦ Κλεόχου πατρός, ἀπώκισται δὲ τῆς νήσου καὶ τὸ ἐν Συρίᾳ ὄρος Κάσιον. ἔστι καὶ ἑτέρα Περσίδος καὶ πόλις. καὶ τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κάσιος.	Kasos: one of the Cyclades. 'And those who held Nisyros and Karpathos and Kasos'. It used to be called 'Amphē' and 'Astrabe'; it is now named after Kasos, the father of Kleochos. Mount Kasios in Syria was also settled from this island. There is another Kasos in Persia which is a city, and the ethnonym is 'Kasios'.		* Cf. the entry Κάσιον (κ 105), where the figure appears as "Kasos son of Kleochos". The mention of a "father" may result from the intrusion of an interlinear note (e.g. πατρός) identifying Kleochos' relationship to Kasos. Without such a gloss, ἀπὸ τοῦ Κάσου τοῦ Κλεόχου would be naturally interpreted as "from Kasos son of Kleochos".
109		Κάσπειρος	Κάσπειρος, πόλις Πάρθων προσεχῆς τῇ Ἰνδιῇ. Ἡρόδοτος γ'. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κάσπειροι, ὡς Διονύσιος ἐν γ' Βασσαρικῶν "ἐν δὲ τε Κάσπειροι ποσσυκλυτοί, ἐν δ' Ἀριηνοί". καὶ πάλιν Κοσσαῖος γενεὴν Κασπειρόθεν, οἳ ῥά τε πάντων Ἰνδῶν ὅσοι ἔασιν ἀφάρτερα γούνατ' ἔχουσιν· ὅσον γάρ τ' ἐν ὄρεσιν ἀριστεύουσι λέοντες, ἢ ὅποσον δελφῖνες ἔσω ἀλὸς ἠχρῆσσης, αἰετὸς εἰν ὄρνσι μεταπρέπει ἀγρομένουσιν, ἵπποι τε πλακόντος ἔσω πεδίοιο θέοντες, τόσσον ἐλαφρότατοις περὶπροφέρουσι πόδεσσιν Κάσπειροι μετὰ φύλα τὰ τ' ἄφθιτος ἔλλαχεν ἥως. ἔδει οὖν ὡς Στάγειρος Σταγειρίτης, οὕτως Κάσπειρος Κασπειρίτης· ἄλλ' οἱ βάρβαροι Ἑλληνικὴν ἀναλογίαν οὐ φυλάττουσι.	Kaspeiros: a city of the Parthians situated on the border with India. Herodotos, book 3. The ethnonym is 'Kaspeiroi', as per Dionysios in book 3 of his Bassarika: 'and among them the far-famed Kaspeiroi, and the Arienoī.' And again: 'a Kossaian by descent, from Kaspeiros, who, out of all the Indians that exist have the swiftest knees; for as much as lions excel in the mountains, or as much as dolphins within the resounding sea, as the eagle stands out among the birds that flock together, and as horses dashing across the flat plain, so much do the Kaspeiroi surpass with the lightest feet, among the tribes who the undying Dawn takes as her charge.' As 'Stageirites' is from 'Stageiros', it should therefore be 'Kaspeirites' from 'Kaspeiros'. But barbarians do not observe Greek analogy.	* The extended quotation from Dionysios is printed as verse in Meineke's edition and has therefore been reproduced with line breaks. The OCR, however, collapsed the passage into continuous prose, obscuring its poetic form; this was compounded by the fact that Meineke does not mark the quotation with quotation marks.	* Στάγειρος' and Κάσπειρος' are quasi-pendent nominatives, contextually functioning as eytmons of Σταγειρίτης' and Κάσπειρίτης', respectively.

120	Κῆσταξ	Κάσταξ, Κάστακος, ὡς Νάρυξ Νάρυκος, πόλις Ἰβηρίας. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καστακάιος ὡς Ναρυκάιος. ὁ Ἀππιανὸς φησι.	Kastax, Kastakos (as in 'Naryx', 'Narykos'): a city in Iberia. The ethnonym is 'Kastakaaios', as in 'Narykaaios', according to Appianos.
121	Κῆστωνιον	Κάστωνιον, ὄρος ἐν Ἀσπένδῳ τῆς Παμφυλίας. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κάστωνιος καὶ Κάστωνιον, ἐξ οὗ καὶ Καστωνίτης. ἔδει δὲ Καστωνιώτης ὡς Πηλιώτης.	Kastnion: a mountain at Aspendos in Pamphylia. The ethnonym is 'Kastnios' and 'Kastnion', from which also 'Kastnietes'. However, it should be 'Kastniotes', as in 'Peliotes'.	* The AI translation of ἐν as "in" is awkward here, since an ὄρος is unlikely to be located within a πόλις. The sense is more probably "at" or "by" Aspendos. Compare the broader locative use of ἐν in Homer (Odyssey 19.205: ἐν ὄρεσσιν).
122	Καστωλοῦ πεδίων	Καστωλοῦ πεδίων, Δωριέων, ὡς Ξενοφῶν. ἐκλήθη δὲ ὅτι Καστωλοὺς τοὺς Δωριεῖς οἱ Λυδοὶ φασιν. ἦν δὲ πόλις ἐν Λυδία Καστωλός. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καστώλιος ὡς Σπαρτώλιος. καὶ τὸ κτητικὸν Καστωλικός.	Kastolos Plain: belonging to the Dorians, as per Xenophon. It was so called because the Lydians say that the Dorians are 'Kastoloi'. However, there was a city in Lydia, 'Kastolos'. The ethnonym is 'Kastolios' (as in 'Spartolios') and the possessive is 'Kastolikos'.
123	Κασῶριον	Κασώριον, τὸ πορνεῖον. Ἀριστοφάνης "ἐν κασωρίοισι λείχων". ὁ οἰκῆτωρ κασωρίτης, καὶ θηλυκῶς κασωρίτης καὶ κασωρίς.	Kasorion: a brothel. Aristophanes: 'licking in the kasorion...'. An inhabitant is a 'kasorites'; and in the feminine 'kasoritis' or 'kasoris'.		* The quotation is Aristophanes, Knights 1284–85: τὴν γὰρ αὐτοῦ γλώτταν αἰσχυραῖς ἡδοναῖς λυμνίνεται, ἐν κασωρείοισι λείχων τὴν ἀπόπτυστον δρόσον. The word appears to have been obscure already in antiquity, being unattested elsewhere before the Byzantine period according to the TLG, which may explain its inclusion in early glossaries. Cf. Hesychius s.vv. Κασαυρεῖοις and Κασωρεῖον. The spellings in αυ and ω appear to be interchangeable: Stephanus cites Aristophanes with the ω-form, whereas the transmitted text of Knights is usually printed with αυ. It is also worth noting the iotacised ending -ιον here, in place of the -ειον found in Hesychius. * The entry appears to be providing an inhabitant term analogous to the ethnic forms found throughout Stephanus' geographical entries. Compare Hesychius' Κασάυρα and Κασωρίδες for related formations.
124	Κατῶβαθμος	Κατάβαθμος, τόπος ἐν Λιβύῃ μεταξύ τοῦ Ἄμμωνος καὶ τοῦ Παραϊτονίου. ὁ οἰκῆτωρ Καταβαθμίτης, ὡς Φελλὸς Φελλίτης.	Katabathmos: a place in Libya between Ammon and Paraitonion. An inhabitant is a 'Katabathmites', just as 'Phellites' is from Phellos.		* 'Φελλός' is a quasi-pendent nominative, contextually an eytmon of 'Φελλίτης'.
125	Κατακεκαυμένη	Κατακεκαυμένη, χώρα τῆς Ἑφρεσίας. Στράβων τρισκαίδεκάτῳ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κατακεκαυμενίτης "ἄδενδρος ἅπασα πλὴν τῆς ἀμπέλου τῆς τὸν Κατακεκαυμενίτην φεροῦσης οἶνον. εἰκάζουσι δὲ τινες ἐκ κεραυνοβολιῶν καὶ πρηστήρων συμβῆναι". ἔστι καὶ νῆσος ἐν τῇ Ἐρυθρᾷ θαλάσῃ.	Katakekaumene: a region in Ephesian territory. Strabo, book 13. The ethnonym is 'Katakekaumenites': 'entirely devoid of trees except for the vine that bears the Katakekaumenite wine. Some conjecture that it came about from lightning-strikes and whirlwinds'. It is also an island in the Red Sea.
127	Κατῶνεια	Κατάνεια, οὐδετέρως, πόλις ... ὡς Θεόπομπος λε' Φιλippiκῶν. ὁ οἰκῆτῆς Κατανειρεὺς ὡς Μεγαρεὺς.	Kataneira (neuter): a city [...] as per Theopompos in book 36 of his Philippika. An inhabitant is a 'Kataneireus', as in 'Megareus'.	* The AI translation dropped the '...' (possibly interference from Billerbeck).
126	Κατῶνη	Κατάνη, πόλις Σικελίας. Ἐκαταῖος Εὐρώπῃ "μετὰ δὲ Κατάνη πόλις, ὑπὲρ δὲ ὄρος Αἴτνη", ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς Κατάνης Χαρώνδας, ὁ δῖος τῶν Αῠνησι νομοθετῶν. κέκληται δὲ οὕτως, ἐπειδὴ κατέβη πρὸς τὸν Ἀμενανὸν ποταμὸν ἢ Θεοκλέους τοῦ Χαλκιδέως ναὺς, ἣν Δωριεῖς χωρὶς τοῦ « υ » νᾶν φασιν, ἢ ὅτι τῆς Αἴτνης κατατεθείσης τὰ ἄνω κάτω γέγονεν. ἔστι καὶ ἄλλη κατέναντι τῆς Λέσβου πληθυντικῶς λεγομένη. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Καταναῖος καὶ θηλυκῶς καὶ οὐδετέρως.	Katane: a city in Sicily. Hekataios in his Europe: 'and next Katane, a city, and above it Mount Aitne'. Charondas was from Katane, one of the lawmakers made famous by the Athenians. It got this name either from when the ship of Theokles of Chalkis went down the River Amnanos, for the Dorians pronounce 'ship' as 'nan' without the υ; or because when Aitne was placed there what was above became below. There is also another Katane, opposite Lesbos, spoken of in the plural. The ethnonym is 'Katanaaios' also in both the feminine and the neuter.	* "ὁ δῖος τῶν Αῠνησι νομοθετῶν": the AI translation misses an important nuance. The combination of the partitive genitive (τῶν νομοθετῶν) with the ethnic dative (Αῠνησι) gives the sense "one of the lawgivers celebrated among the Athenians", rather than "a lawgiver of the Athenians". The point is not that Charondas legislated for Athens, but that he was regarded by the Athenians—most notably by Aristotle—as one of the great lawgivers of the Greek world.	* "ἢ ὅτι τῆς Αἴτνης κατατεθείσης τὰ ἄνω κάτω γέγονεν": "or because, when Aitne was placed there, what was above became below." The precise sense is unclear. One possible explanation is an allusion to the tradition that Zeus buried Typhon beneath Mount Aitna (Apollodoros 1.6.3), so that what had formerly been above ground was now beneath it. Comparable myths connecting volcanic activity with the imprisonment of monstrous beings are widespread in antiquity.
129	Καταννοῖ	Καταννοί, ἔθνος πρὸς τῇ Κασπίᾳ θαλάσῃ. Ἐκαταῖος Ἀσία.	Katannoi: a people on the Caspian Sea. Hekataios in his Asia.

128	Καταονῖα	Καταονία, μόιρα ἐσχάτη τοῦ Ταύρου. Στράβων δὲ Καππαδοκίας ταύτην φησίν. οἱ οἰκοῦντες Κατάονες, ὡς τῆς Λυκαονίας Λυκάονες.	Kataonia: the farthest part of the Tauros range. Strabo says that it belongs to Kappadokia. The inhabitants are 'Kataones' (as in 'Lykaones', from Lykaonia).	* μόιρα ἐσχάτη τοῦ Ταύρου. The AI translation's "an outlying district of Taurus" misleadingly suggests part of a settlement. Ταῦρος here refers to the Taurus mountain range, and the phrase denotes a remote region on its fringes. The translation therefore uses "the Taurus range" to make the reference clear.*
130	Κῶιτρη	Κάτρη, πόλις Κρήτης, τὸν Ἴωνικὸν ἔχουσα τρόπον, ὡς Ἡρωδιανὸς περὶ τῆς Ὀλύκρης γράφων. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κατράιος ὡς Ἀσκραῖος.	Katre: a city in Crete, in the Ionic form, as Herodian says when writing about Olykra. The ethnonym is 'Katraios', as in 'Askraios'.
151	Κεκρυφῶλεια	Κεκρυφάλεια, ἄκρα τις, περὶ ἣν ἐνίκησαν Αἰγινήτας Ἀθηναῖοι. τινὲς δὲ νῆσον αὐτὴν φασὶ Πελοποννήσου. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κεκρυφαλεὺς.	Kekryphaleia: a certain promontory, around which the Athenians defeated the Aiginetans. Some, however, say that it is an island in the Peloponnese. The ethnonym is 'Kekryphaleus'.		* The translation of περὶ ἣν depends in part on whether Kekryphaleia is understood as an island or a promontory, and whether the battle in question was fought on land or at sea. The ancient sources are themselves uncertain on the first point. Thucydides 1.105, however, seems to place the engagement in a naval context (καὶ ὕστερον Ἀθηναῖοι ἐναυμάχησαν ἐπὶ Κεκρυφαλείᾳ Πελοποννησίων ναυσὶ, καὶ ἐνίκων Ἀθηναῖοι), which would favour translating περὶ ἣν as "near" rather than "around".
180	Κορῶνεια	Κορῶνεια, πόλις Βοιωτίας. Ἐκαταῖος Εὐρώπῃ. ἀπὸ Κορώνου τοῦ Θερσάνδρου. ἐν ταύτῃ οὐ φαίνεται ἀσπάλαξ, πάσης τῆς Βοιωτίας ἐχούσης τὸ ζῶον, κἂν τις ἐξωθεν ἐνέγκῃ εἰς τὴν Κορωνέων χώραν, οὐ δύναται ζῆν. δευτέρα πόλις Πελοποννήσου [μεταξὺ] Σικυῶνος καὶ Κορίνθου. τρίτῃ τῆς Φθιώτιδος. ἔστι δὲ καὶ φρούριον τῆς Ἀμβρακίας. τετάρτῃ πόλις Κύπρου. ἔστι καὶ χερρόνησος πρὸς τὴν Ἀττικὴν. πέμπτῃ πόλις Σαλαμινίων Κορώνη· ὁ πολίτης Κορώνιος καὶ Κορωνεύς. οἱ δὲ φασὶ παρὰ τὴν Κορῶνειαν Κορωνεῖς, παρὰ δὲ τὴν Κορώνην Κορωναεῖς.	Koroneia: a city in Boiotia. Hekataios in his Europe. After Koronos son of Thersandros. The blind mole-rat is not found in this place (even though all of Boiotia has the animal) and even if someone brings one from outside into the territory of the Koroneians, it can't survive. (2) a city in the Peloponnese [between] Sikyon and Corinth. (3) one in Phthiotis; there is also a fortress in Ambrakia. (4) a city in Cyprus; there is also a peninsula off of Attika. (5) a city: Korone, of the Salaminians. A citizen is a 'Koronaïos' or 'Koroneus'. They say, however, that 'Koronieus' is from 'Koroneia' and 'Koronaeus' is from 'Korone'.		* "ἀσπάλαξ": The specific animal denoted by this word appears to be the blind mole-rat rather than a mole in the generic sense (cf. Aristotle, Hist. an. 533a3). The term is commonly identified with the greater blind mole-rat (Spalax microphthalmus / S. typhlus) of the family Spalacidae. More general Greek terms for 'mole' include ἰνδουρος and σκάλοψ. * "χερρόνησος πρὸς τὴν Ἀττικὴν": The sense is that of a peninsula adjoining or connected to Attica. While a literal rendering such as "touching Attica" captures the Greek, a more natural English expression for this geographical relationship is "off Attica". Nb. χερρόνησος rather than χερσόννησος. The Attic form is noteworthy.
188	Κοτιῶειον	Κοτιάειον, πόλις τῆς ἐπικτήτου Φρυγίας. Στράβων ιβ'. τινὲς δὲ φασὶ Κοσιαεῖον ὀφείλει. δοκεῖ δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ Κόσα Κόσαιον, ὡς τοῦ Μίδα Μίδαιον, καὶ προσθέσει τοῦ « ι » Κοσιαῖον, καὶ τροπῇ Κοτιαῖον. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κοτιαεὺς. ἔνθα ἦν Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Ἀσκληπιάδου γραμματικὸς πολυμαθέστατος χρηματίζων, ὃς περὶ παντοδαπῆς ὕλης κδ' ἔγραψε βιβλούς.	Kotiaeion: a city in Phrygia Epiktetos. Strabo, book 12. Some say that it ought to be 'Kosiaeion'; it does seem that 'Kosaeion' is from the name Kosas (as 'Midaieion' is from the name Midas), then it becomes 'Kosiaeion' by addition of ι and 'Kotiaeion' through sound shift. The ethnonym is 'Kotiaeus'. There was a grammarian there: Alexander son of Asklepiades, styled 'the most learned', who wrote twenty-four books on miscellaneous matters.		* "ἀπὸ τοῦ Κόσα Κόσαιον, ὡς τοῦ Μίδα Μίδαιον": The article here belongs to Stephanus' regular formula for expressing derivation (quasi-pendent nominative constructions, cf. κ 3: ὡς τὸ Βυζάντιον Βυζάντιος). Its appearance in the genitive reflects the Doric masculine α-stems under discussion: their inflection is only visible in forms such as τοῦ Ἰούδα.
205	Κρανῖδες	Κρανίδες, συνοικία πρὸς τῷ Πόντῳ. Παρθένιος ἐν Ἀνθίππῃ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κρανῖται.	Kranides: a community near the Black Sea. Parthenios in his Anthippe. The ethnonym is 'Kranitai'.		* The verb χρηματίζω is understood in its common Late Greek sense "be called" or "be known as", which best suits Stephanus' usage in this passage. * συνοικία can denote either a shared dwelling (Aeschin. 1.124) or cohabitation (P.Fay. 37.2). Steph. appears to use the term of a settlement or inhabited community, hence the translation "community".
222	Κριῶα	Κριῶα, δῆμος τῆς Ἀντιοχίδος φυλῆς. ὁ δημότης Κριωεύς. τὰ τοπικὰ Κριῶθεν κατὰ συγκοπὴν καὶ Κριῶζε καὶ Κριῶσιν.	Krioa: a deme of the Antiochis tribe. A deme-member is a 'Krioëus'. The locative terms are 'Kriothen' (through syncope) as well as 'Krioze' and 'Kriosi'.		* "τὰ τοπικὰ": a grammatical term denoting words that express spatial relations of place, motion towards, or motion from a place. Cf. Dionysius Thrax 19(24).6: Τὰ δὲ τοπικά, οἷον ἄνω κάτω· ὧν σχήσεις εἰσὶ τρεῖς, ἢ ἐν τόπῳ, ἢ εἰς τόπον, ἢ ἐκ τόπου, οἷον οἶκοι οἰκάδε οἰκοθεν (Hilgard). The term has been translated "locative terms".

287	Κ	ῤρη	Κύρη, νῆσος ἐν τῷ Περσικῷ πόντῳ. Ἑκαταῖος ἐν περιηγήσεως δευτέρῳ. ὁ νησιώτης Κυραῖος ὡς Ἀσκραῖος.	Kyre: an island in the Persian Gulf. Hekataios in book 2 of his Periegesis. An islander is a 'Kyraios', as in 'Askraios'.	* The AI translation renders Περίγησις as Periodos. While this is not strictly incorrect, since Periegesis and Periodos are alternative titles of the same work, the translation retains Periegesis in accordance with the Greek ascription.
288	Κυρ	ῤνη	Κυρήνη, πόλις Λιβύης, ἀπὸ Κυρήνης τῆς Ὑφέως [κατὰ Πίνδαρον] ἢ Κύρης πηγῆς ἐγχωρίου. ἔστι καὶ Ἰβηρίας. καὶ Μασσαλίας ἄλλη. τὸ ἔθνικόν Κυρηναῖος. ἐντεῦθεν ἦν Ἐρατοσθένης Ἀγακλέους παῖς ὁ ἱστορικός. καὶ Κυρηναῖς ὡς Θηβαῖς. καὶ Κυρηνίτης.	Kyrene: a city in Libya, either after Kyrene, the daughter of Hypseus [according to Pindar] or after the local spring Kyre. There is also a Kyrene in Iberia. And there is another in Massalia. The ethnonym is 'Kyrenaioi'. Eratosthenes the scholar, son of Agaklees, was from there. There is also 'Kyrenais' (as in 'Thebais'), and 'Kyrenites'.	\	* "Agaklees" is the expected nominative corresponding to the genitive Ἀγακλέους and has therefore been retained in the translation. Elsewhere, however, the figure appears as "Aglaos".
289	Κ	ῤρης	Κύρης, Κύρητος, πόλις, ὡς Φάγρης Μένδης Ἀδρύμης. τὸ ἔθνικόν Κυρήσιος.	Kyres, Kyretos: a city (as in 'Phagres', 'Mendes', 'Adrymes'). The ethnonym is 'Kyresios'.
290	Κ	ῤρις	Κύρις, μητρόπολις Σαβίνων. τὸ ἔθνικόν Κυρίτης. τὸ κτητικόν Κυρίτιος καὶ Κυριτία ἢ Ἥρα.	Kyris: a metropolis of the Sabines. The ethnonym is 'Kyrites'. The possessive is 'Kyritios', and there is also Hera Kyritia.
291	Κ	ῤρνος	Κύρνος, νῆσος πρόσβορρος Ἰαπυγίας. Ἑκαταῖος Εὐρώπῃ. τὸ ἔθνικόν Κύρνιοι καὶ Κυρναῖοι. φαοὶ δὲ "τοὺς Κυρναίους πολυχρονιωτάτους εἶναι (οἰκοῦσι δὲ οὗτοι περὶ τὴν Σαρδόνα) διὰ τὸ μέλιτι ἀεὶ χρῆσθαι. πλεῖστον δὲ τοῦτο γίνεται παρ' αὐτοῖς".	Kyrnos: an island to the north of Iapygia. Hekataios in his Europe. The ethnonym is 'Kyrnioi' or 'Kyrnaioi'. They say 'that the Kyrnaioi are extremely long-lived (those who live round about Sardinia) because they constantly make use of honey, and this is produced by them in the greatest quantities.'	* πολυχρονιωτάτους is an elative superlative. The AI translation's "most long-lived" is misleading: the force is intensive rather than comparative, i.e. "extremely" or "exceedingly long-lived". The word is commonly applied to semi-mythical creatures, especially reptiles (ἐρπετὰ); cf. Eusebius, Praep. Ev. 1.10.46, quoting Philo of Byblos.	* φαοὶ + quotation. Billerbeck does not print quotation marks here, and the accusative-and-infinitive construction would naturally be understood as indirect speech rather than a direct quotation. The quotation marks have nevertheless been retained in the translation to reflect Meineke's edition.
292	Κ	ῤρου πόλις	Κύρου πόλις, ἥ καὶ Κυρέσχατα καλεῖται, πόλις πρὸς τοῖς ἐσχάτοις Περσίδος. ὁ πολίτης καθ' ἡμᾶς Κυροπολίτης, κατὰ δὲ Πέρσας Κυρεσχατηνοὶ ὡς Ἀραξηνοὶ καὶ Καμβυσηνοὶ.	Kyrou polis, also called 'Kyreschata': a city at the farthest limits of Persia. A citizen, for us, is a 'Kyropolites', but among the Persians they are 'Kyreschathenoi' (as in 'Arazenoi' and 'Kambysenoi').	* The AI translation failed to recognise Σαρδόνα as the accusative of Σαρδῶν ("Sardinia"), and consequently did not identify the place-name correctly.
293	Κ	ῤρρος	Κύρρος, πόλις Συρίας, ἥς ἀκρόπολις Γίνδαρος. ὁ πολίτης Κυρρέστης, ὡς Πολύβιος πέμπτῳ, καὶ Κυρρεστίς ἢ Ἀθηνᾶ. καὶ ἡ χώρα Κυρρεστική. Στράβων ἐκκαιδεκάτῃ. Δημήτριος δὲ ὁ Ἀντιγόνοῦ τὸ Κυρήστης διὰ τοῦ « ἡ » φησὶ καθύ...	Kyrrros: a city in Syria, the acropolis of which is Gindaros. A citizen is a 'Kyrrestes', as per Polybios, book 5; there is also Athena Kyrrestis. The surrounding territory is 'Kyrrestike'. Strabo, book 16. Demetrios son of Antigonos says that 'Kyrrestes' is spelled with η — through...		* Meineke marks the text as corrupt after καθύ, suggesting the loss of something like καθ' ὕψους τοῦ ἐνὸς π]. Billerbeck, by contrast, simply prints η. The translation attempts to reflect the lacuna indicated by Meineke through the rendering "η—through ...".
294	Κυρ	ταῖα	Κυρταία, πόλις ἐν τῇ Ἐρυθρᾷ θαλάσῃ, εἰς ἣν ὑπερῶρισεν Ἀρταξέρξης Μεγάβυζον. Κτησίας τρίτῳ Περσικῶν. τὸ ἔθνικόν ἐκ τῆς τέχνης Κυρταϊανός, ἐκ δὲ τῆς χώρας Κυρταϊηνός ὡς Σωφηνός καὶ Ἀραξηνός.	Kyrtaia: a city on the Red Sea, to which Artaxerxes exiled Megabyzos. Ktesias in book 3 of his Persika. According to the grammatical rule the ethnonym is 'Kyrtaianos', but in local usage it is 'Kyrtaienos' (as in 'Sophenos' and 'Araxenos').	* "ἐκ τῆς τέχνης": The AI translation's "from the craft" is misleading. In grammatical contexts τέχνη commonly denotes the grammatical art or technical tradition, and the phrase here means "according to the grammatical rule" or "on technical grounds" (cf. κ 82, Καρία).	* ἐν τῇ Ἐρυθρᾷ θαλάσῃ. As with expressions such as ἐν ποταμῷ (Il. 18.51), ἐν denotes location "on" or "by" the body of water rather than "in" it. No other references to Kyrtaia are known, Ktesias apparently being the only author to mention it.
295	Κ	ῤρτος	Κύρτος, πόλις Αἰγύπτου ἐν τῷ μεσογείῳ. ἐκ ταύτης Διονύσιος ἦν διάσημος ἱατρός, ἀπὸ τῆς πατρίδος, οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος Κυρτός ὀνομαζόμενος, οὐ μέννηται Ἐρένιος Φίλων ἐν τῷ περὶ ἱατρῶν. ὁ τόνος τοῦ μὲν ἔθνικοῦ ὀξύς ὁμόφωνος τῷ πάθει, τοῦ δὲ κυρίου τῆς πόλεως βαρύς, ὡς τὸ κόντος καὶ πόντος.	Kyrtos: a city in Egypt in the interior. Dionysios, a distinguished physician, was from this place and was called 'Kyrtos' after his homeland—not from the shape of his body; Herennios Philo mentions him in his On Physicians. The stress of the ethnonym is oxytone, homophonous with the physical condition, whereas that of the proper name of the city is barytone, as in kontos (κόντος) and pontos (πόντος).	* The AI translation mistranslates the remarks on accentuation. In discussions of Greek prosody, ὀξύς and βαρύς, when applied to a word's τόνος, denote oxytone and barytone stress patterns rather than the acute and grave accents. This is clear from the comparison with forms such as κόντος, which are barytone despite not being written with a grave. The error appears to stem from a failure to recognise the technical metalinguistic use of these terms.

296	Κύρτωνες	Κύρτωνες, πόλις Βοιωτίας. Πausanias ἐνάτω. τὸ δὲ ἀρχαῖον [τῶ] πολιᾱματι δν[ομα] Κυρτώνη- τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυρτώνιος, τοῦ δὲ πολίχνιου Κύρτωνες.	Kyrtones: a city in Boiotia. Pausanias, book 9. The ancient name for the town was 'Kyrtone'. The ethnonym is 'Kyrtonios', but that of the town was 'Kyrtones'.	* Billerbeck's edition is less reconstructed than Meineke's; the AI translation appears to reflect Billerbeck's rather than what Meineke printed.	* Stephanus' distinction between the ethnonyms Κύρτωνες (of the πολίχνιον) and Κυρτώνιος (of the πόλις) appears to presuppose the earlier statement that the settlement's ancient name was Κυρτώνη. The implication seems to be that the site was formerly a small town (πολιᾱμα/πολίχνιον) called Κυρτώνη, whose inhabitants were Κύρτωνες, but later developed into a πόλις called Κύρτωνες, with the corresponding civic ethnonym Κυρτώνιος.
297	Κυρτῶνιος	Κυρτώνιος, πόλις Ἰταλίας. Πολύβιος τρίτῳ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν τῷ τῆς χώρας ἔθει Κυρτωνίνος ὡς Σατορνίνος.	Kyrtonios: a city in Italy. Polybios, book 3. In local usage, the ethnonym is 'Kyrtoninos' (as in 'Saturninos').
298	Κύτα	Κύτα, πόλις Κολχική, πατρὶς Μηδείας. ἔστι καὶ ἄλλη Σκυθίας. ὁ πολίτης Κυταῖος, ἐξ οὗ καὶ Κυταεὺς "πύργους εἰσόψεσθε Κυταεὸς Αἰήταο". τὸ θηλυκὸν Κυταΐας. καὶ Κυταία, Λυκόφρων "ὅς εἰς Κυταίαν τὴν Λιβυστίνην μολών". [οἱ Λιβυστίνοι γὰρ ἔθνος παρακείμενον Κόλχοις.] λέγεται καὶ Κυταίς ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυταῖος. οἱ δὲ ὅτι δύο εἰσὶ Κύτα, ταῦτα καὶ τῆς Εὐρώπης. ἔστι καὶ Κύταιον πόλις Κρήτης.	Kyta: a Kolchian city, the homeland of Medeia. There is also another in Skythia. A citizen is a 'Kytaios', from which there is also 'Kytaieus': 'you will behold the towers of Kytaieus Aietes'. The feminine is 'Kytaiias', as well as 'Kytaia': Lykophron: 'who came to Libystine Kytaia'. [The Libystinoi are a people who neighbour the Kolchians.] 'Kytaiis' is also said, from the form 'Kytaios'. Some say that there are two places called Kyta, both in Europe. There is also Kytaion, a city in Crete.	* The AI translation renders Κυταεὸς as "Kytaios". Κυταῖος is formally an Ionic genitive of Κυταεὺς (Attic Κυταίεως). It is therefore preferable to retain the uninflected form in the quotation from the Argonautica; Stephanus is citing it as evidence for the existence of the form Κυταεὺς.	* Λιβυστίνοι (Libystinoi) appears to be an obscure variant of Λιβυστικός. Rather than translating the term simply as "Libyans", it has been rendered "Libystines" to preserve the form and avoid suggesting ordinary North Africans. The word occurs in Lycophron 1312. Hornblower (ad loc.) suggests an association with Libya deriving from Herodotus 2.104–5, where the Kolchians are presented as being of Egyptian descent.
299	Κυτέριον	Κυτέριον, πόλις Οἰνώντρων ἐν τῇ μεσογείᾳ. Ἐκαταῖος Εὐρώπῃ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυτεριώτης. δύναται καὶ τῷ τῆς χώρας ἔθει Κυτερῖνος.	Kyterion: a city of the Oinotroi in the interior. Hekataios in his Europe. In local usage, the ethnonym can also be 'Kyterinos'.
300	Κύτινα	Κύτινα, πόλις Θεσσαλίας, ὡς Θέων ἐν ὑπομνήματι Λυκόφρονος. ὁ πολίτης Κυτιναῖος. ἔστι καὶ Κυτίνιον μία τῶν τριῶν τῶν Δωρικῶν. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυτινιώτης.	Kytina: a city in Thessaly, as per Theon in his commentary on Lykophron. A citizen is a 'Kytinaios'. There is also Kytinion, one of the three Dorian cities. The ethnonym is 'Kytiniates'.	* The AI translation italicises "Lycophron", apparently treating it as the title of a work rather than the name of an author.
301	Κυτῶνιον	Κυτώνιον, πόλις μεταξύ Μυσίας καὶ Λυδίας. Θεόπομπος Ἑλληνικῶν ὁγδόῳ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν ὅμοιον τῷ ἡγουμένῳ.	Kytonion: a city between Mysia and Lydia. Theopompus in book 8 of his Hellenika. The ethnonym is the same as that of the preceding entry.
302	Κύτωρος	Κύτωρος, πόλις Παφλαγονίας, ἀπὸ Κυτῶρου τοῦ Φρίξου παιδός. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυτωριεὺς καὶ θηλυκὸν Κυτωριάς. λέγονται καὶ Κυτωρίται. καὶ Κυτῳριος καὶ Κυτωρία θηλυκόν.	Kytoros: a city in Paphlagonia, after Kytoros son of Phrixos. The ethnonym is 'Kytorieus', and the feminine is 'Kytorias'. They are also called 'Kytoritai'. Also 'Kytorios', 'Kytoria' is the feminine.
303	Κύφος	Κύφος, πόλις Περραιβίας. "Γουνεὺς δ' ἐκ Κύφου ἤγε δύο καὶ εἴκοσι νῆας". ἀπὸ Κύφου τοῦ παιδὸς Περραιβοῦ τοῦ π... δύο δ' εἰσὶ Κύφοι, ἡ μὲν Περραιβίας ἡ δὲ Θετταλίας. καὶ ποταμὸς Κύφος. ὁ πολίτης Κυφασίος. Λυκόφρων "ἐν ἡ Κυφαίων δύσμορον στρατηλάτην".	Kyphos: a city in Perrhaibia. 'And Gouneus from Kyphos led twenty-two ships'. After Kyphos, the son of Perrhaibos, son of P.... There are two Kyphoi: one in Perrhaibia and one in Thessaly. There is also the river Kyphos. A citizen is a 'Kyphaios'. Lykophron: 'in which the ill-fated commander of the Kyphaioi'.	* The AI translation filled the OCR lacuna π... in Meineke's text with P<alleneus>, adopting Billerbeck's editorial restoration. The supplement is not present in the transmitted text.
304	Κυχρεῖος πάγος	Κυχρεῖος πάγος, περὶ Σαλαμίνα. Σοφοκλῆς Τεύκρω. ἀπὸ Κυχρέως τοῦ Σαλαμίνος καὶ Ποσειδῶνος, ὃς ὄφρις ἐπεκλήθη διὰ τὴν τραχύτητα τῶν τρόπων, ὃν λυμαινόμενον τὴν νῆσον ἀπῆλασεν Εὐρύλοχος, ἐδέξατο δ' ἐν Ἐλευσίνι Δημήτηρ καὶ ἀμφίπολον ἐποίησεν. ἀπ' αὐτοῦ δὲ καὶ ἡ Σαλαμῖς Κυχρεΐα ἐκλήθη, ὡς Στράβων. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυχρεοπαγίτης.	Kychreios outcrop: near Salamis. Sophokles in his Teukros. After Kychreus son of Salamis and Poseidon, who was named 'Snake' because he was very wild by disposition. Eurylochos drove him out because he was ravaging the island, and Demeter received him at Eleusis and made him her attendant. Salamis was also called 'Kychreia' after him, as per Strabo, book 9. The ethnonym is 'Kychreopagites'.		* The account of Kychreus is a close paraphrase of Strabo 9.1.9, but with a rationalising gloss. The epithet "Snake" is explained through Kychreus' τραχύτης, apparently understood as a wild, violent, or untamed disposition. The tradition thus interprets the name as a metaphorical description of character rather than as evidence that Kychreus was originally conceived as a serpent figure.
305	Κύψελα	Κύψελα, φρούριον τετειχισμένον ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ ὑπὸ Μαντινέων. Θουκυδίδης πέμπτῃ. ἔστι καὶ Κύψελα πόλις Θράκης πλησίον τοῦ Ἑβρου ποταμοῦ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κυψελῖνος ἢ Κυψεληγός.	Kypsela: a fortress in Arkadia, its walls were constructed by the Mantineans. Thucydides, book 5. There is also another Kypsela, a city in Thrace near the river Hebros. The ethnonym is 'Kypselinos' or 'Kypselenos'.
306	Κῶβρυς	Κῶβρυς, πόλις Θράκης. Θεόπομπος Φιλιππικῶν ἐνάτῳ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κωβρύτης, ὡς Αἴγυς Αἰγύτης.	Kobrys: a city in Thrace. Theopompus in book 9 of his Philippika. The ethnonym is 'Kobrytes', just as 'Aigytes' is from 'Aigys'.		* 'Αἴγυς' is a quasi-pendent nominative functioning as an etymon of 'Αἰγύτης'.
307	Κῶθων	Κῶθων, νῆσος οὐ πόρρω Κυθήρων. Ἀρτεμίδωρος ἐν ἐπιτομῇ τῶν ἑνδεκα. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κωθώνιος ὡς Σιδώνιος.	Kothon: an island not far from Kythera. Artemidoros, in an epitome of his eleven books. The ethnonym is 'Kothonios', as in 'Sidonios'.	* The AI translation treats the epitome as the title of a work. It is instead an epitome of Artemidoros' eleven-book geography.

308		Κωλιῶς	Κωλιάς, ἄκρα ἥτοι ἀκτὴ Φαληροῖ, ὅπου καὶ Ἀφροδίτη Κωλιάς. ὁ δὲ τόπος καλεῖται· ἐκκειμένος γάρ ἐστι καὶ ὁμοῖος ἀνθρώπου κώλῳ. τὰ τοπικὰ Κωλιάθεν καὶ Κωλιοῖ ἐν τόπῳ καὶ Κωλιάδε. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κωλιεύς, ὅθεν καὶ τὸ Κωλιάς. καὶ Κώλιον οὐδέτερον. καὶ Κώλιοι ὡς Σούνιοι.	Kolias: a promontory or maybe a headland at Phaleron, where there is also Aphrodite Kolias. The place is so called because as it stretches out it looks like human buttocks. The locative terms are 'Koliatherai', 'Kolioi' (in the place) and 'Koliade'. The ethnonym is 'Kolieus', from which is also 'Kolias'. The neuter is 'Kolion'. There is also 'Kolioi', as in 'Sounioi'.		* "ἄκρα ἥτοι ἀκτὴ Φαληροῖ". Stephanus is drawing attention to the fact that Ἀκτὴ appears to function here as a quasi-proper name for the headland at Phaleron (cf. Pausanias 2.8.5; Strabo 8.8.5).
309		Κῶλοι	Κῶλοι, ἔθνος πρὸς τῷ Καυκάσῳ. Ἐκαταῖος Ἀσία. αἱ δὲ ὑπώρρειαι τοῦ Καυκάσου καλοῦνται Κωλικὰ ὄρη. ἡ χώρα Κωλική.	Koloi: a people near the Caucasus. Hekataios in his Asia. The foothills of the Caucasus are called the 'Kolika' mountains. The surrounding territory is 'Koliike'.
310		Κῶμη	Κῶμη, ἐν ταῖς μακραῖς ὁδοῖς μέσα χωρία ἔκτισαν πρὸς τὸ κοιμᾶσθαι νυκτὸς ἐπιγενομένης, ὅθεν καὶ ἐπικέκληται, ὡς Φιλόδεσνος. ὁ οἰκῆτωρ ἐγκώμιος. Ἅσιοδος "εἰ γάρ τοι καὶ χρήμ' ἐγκώμιον ἄλλο γένοιτο". καὶ κωμαῖος καὶ κωμήτης ἀρσενικῶς καὶ θηλυκῶς διὰ τοῦ « ι »· καὶ ὁ δῆμος κῶμη. εἴρηται ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐν αὐταῖς κοιμᾶσθαι τε καὶ αὐλίζεσθαι. λέγεται καὶ κωμήτωρ.	Kome: along long routes they established halfway points for the purpose of sleeping when night fell, after which they are now named, as per Philoxenos. An inhabitant is an 'enkomios'. Hesiod: 'For if some matter were to arise for you as an enkomios'. And also a 'komaioi', and 'kometes' in the masculine, which in the feminine is written with ι. A deme is also a kome, named after the practice of taking shelter and sleeping there. 'Kometor' is also said.	* The AI translation failed to recognise κομήτης and κομήτις as corresponding masculine and feminine forms, and consequently obscured the gender distinction being made in the Greek.
311		Κωνῶπιη	Κωνῶπιη, πόλις Ἀκαρνανίας. Πολύβιος πέμπτῳ. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κωνωπεύς καὶ Κωνωπίτης καὶ Κωνωπαῖος. ἔστι καὶ Κωνῶπιον, τῆς Μαιώτιδος λίμνης, ὅπου φασι τοὺς λύκους παρὰ τῶν ἀλιέων λαμβάνοντας τροφὴν φυλάττειν τὴν θήραν· ἐὰν δὲ ὑπολάβωσιν ἀδικεῖσθαι, λυμαίνεσθαι καὶ τὰ λῖνα καὶ τοὺς ἰχθύας αὐτῶν. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Κωνῶπιος καὶ Κωνωπιεύς.	Konope: a city in Akarnania. Polybios, book 5. The ethnonym is 'Konopeus', 'Konopites' and 'Konopaios'. There is also a Konopion on the Maiotic Lake, where they say that wolves, when they receive food from the fishermen, guard the catch; but if they suspect that they are being cheated they wreak havoc on both the nets and the fish. The ethnonym is 'Konopios' and 'Konopieus'.
